The Company was founded as G&J Haden in Trowbridge in 1816 to erect the steam engines of Boulton & Watt. It became a major HVAC contractor taking over Troughton & Young in 1969, a leading electrical contractor, to form Haden Young. In 1970 acquired Carrier Engineering UK.

(History published 2004)
The Company dates back to 1785. From the 1880’s it specialised in refrigeration and merged with Hall-Thermotank in 1976

(History published 1985)
Consulting Engineers established by Henry Lea in 1862

(History published 2012)
The Company was founded by Mark Honeywell in 1906 but can trace its beginnings to the Butz Thermo-Electric Regulator Company set up by Alfred Butz in 1885

(History published 1985)
The story of Honeywell from Alfred Butz and W R Sweatt, from the Consolidated Temperature Controlling Company of 1891 to the Minneapolis Heat Regulator Company and Honeywell

(History published 1995)
The original firm of what later became the How Group was William Truswell purchased by Cecil How in 1947

(History published in 1997)
The HVCA, a Trade Association, was established in 1904

(Published in 2004)
A history of the HVCA celebrating the 75th anniversary of its founding

(Published 1979)
A history of the HVCA celebrating the centenary of its founding in 1904
(Published in 2004)
The Institute of Plumbers was incorporated as a Company in 1907

(History published in 2005)
The Johnson Electric Service Company was established in 1885, its founder being Warren Johnson who invented an electric thermostat. The Company later became a world leader in pneumatic controls.

(History published 1985)